A Slight Difference

In a glow of triumph after making a small slam at bridge, Al Cowan wasa mazed by his wife's scathing comments.

"What's wrong, honey?" He inquired. "I made it, didn't I?"

"Yes," she retorted, "but if you had played it the way you should have, you wouldn't have made it."

MRS. WOOLDRIDGE ACCEPTS TEACHING POSITION IN WISE

Mrs. Jeter W. Wooldridge, co-owner with her husband of the Modern Beauty Shop in Covington, Va., has accepted the post of instructress in the Cosmetology Department of the Wise County Technical School, a regional training center, under the State Board of Education and the Wise County school system.

Mrs. Wooldridge was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, and reared in Appomattox County, Va. She is a graduate of Appomattox High School. She went to Covington to work in 1936. She and her husband became co-owners of the Modern Beauty Shop in 1942.

She has missed only one State Hairdressers' Convelton, and has attended two New York State Conventions, 12 international beauty shows, and had hair styling lessons under a number of nationally known stylists.

Mrs. Wooldridge has signed a ten-month contract, and reported for the pre-school conference on August 12. She is attending a Trade Industrial Conference at VPI this week.

The school in Wise is one of six such schools in Virginia, and will be operated for the first time this year.

Mrs. Wooldridge has had a wealth of teaching experience in various offices she has held at the Covington Baptist Church. She is immediate past president of the Covington Business and Professional Women's Club, and has held other offices in that organization. During her absence, her shop will be operated by J. W. Wooldridge and the staff of operators now on duty there. Mrs. Wooldridge is the daughter of Mr, and Mrs. L. L. Stewart, of Evergreen.

Comment On Sports

By Pete Fritchie

Washington.- The College All-Stars made a game of it against the New York Giants the other night, in Chicago and partially quelled beefs that a good college all-star team is no match for a good professional football team.

The professionals are getting the best of the series, it's true, but the college lads are certainly not making it easy for them. In fact, the other night the All-Stars jumped off to a lead and at half time the game was certainly even. Only in the second half did the pros get the upper hand and the final score, 22-12 does not represent a rout by any means.

It's hard for any team of players recruited from different colleges to learn to work as a unit in the short time available for training prior to the pro-All-Star clash each August. The pro team has the advantage of having played together for several years or at least some of the players have.

Thus the All-Stars play at a disadvantage in this respect. Considering this, and the fact that the All-Star coaches have had very little time to get acquainted with some of their players and their various talents, it must be concluded that the college boys do a good job.

Speaking of college football, Oklahoma - the nation's mightiest in recent years - is going to face a rugged ordeal in Pill in the Sooners' opening game. The Panthers would love to end that Oklahoma winning streak, which threatens to set all kind of records, and at Norman Oklahoma, some people will tell you that the Sooners might be upset.

But this kind of talk has been heard before and it's highly doubtful if even powerful Pittsburgh can turn the trick against Bud Wilkerson's eleven. Yet it may be an interesting game. It may be the first big one of the just-beginning football season.

And Oklahoma can't go on forever. There must be an end to that win streak somewhere. Wilkinson lost some great players last year that might hurt him before the new team gets to functioning well, somehogy like Pill - could always spring an upset. If the Sooners do get by the Panthers, the feeling among those at Norman is that they'll probably go all the way again this year undefeated.

POLIO SURVEY

A survey to discover the rehabilitation needs of all post-polio patients in Virginia is being conducted this summer by the county chapters of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, O. D. Dennis, Jr., State March of Dimes Chairman, announced today.

The survey is part of a nation-wide project by the March of Dimes organization to compile a roster of polio cases of all ages and degree of disability, regardless of date of onset of the disease. The canvass is scheduled for completion by September 1.

"Modern medicine has made impressive strides in developing new rehabilitation techniques in recent years," Dennis said. He pointed out that polio surveys already undertaken show that there are thousands of polio-handicapped in the United States who have not yet had an opportunity for medical evaluation to determine if they might benefit from these new techniques. It is expected that the survey will find similar cases in Virginia.

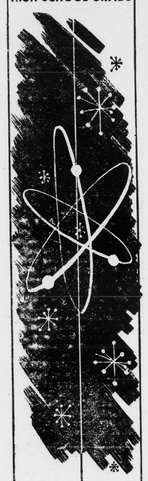
"Some of the techniques employed for those disabled by polio and other causes were unknown or unused as recently as five to ten years ago," Dennis said.

"The March of Dimes organization, with the cooperation of the medical profession, has scored a tremendous victory in its war on polio. We do not now propose to walk off and leave the wounded behind, so long as help for them is possible. We wish to find everyone who has had polio, whether paralytic or non-paralytic. We want to know what their special problems may be, so that they may be helped to regain useful lives, if humanly possible, even though it will take a considerable period of time," he emphasized.

Information sought for each patient includes whether he is employed or attends schools, if he can climb stairs and dress himself, whether he receives regular treatment and if he uses a breathing aid.

The State Chairman asked that all such persons, whetherd isabled or not, send their names and addresses to their county chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

NUCLEAR FIELD now open to HIGH SCHOOL GRADS



One of the most challenging fields in the modern Navy is Nucleonics. Atom-powered submarines such as the USS NAUTILUS must have men to operate her ... men who are physicists as well as submariners. You've got to be good to qualify for submarines, but if you do, you'll get the finest nuclear power training in the world.

When atom-powered ships are added to the fleet, the need for men in this highly specialized field will be even greater.

CROPS COMPARED FOR SILAGE

Sorghum silage has been less nutritious and has produced less total feed per acre than adapted corn hybrids grown for silage in tests at VPI Agricultural Experiment Station.

When planted in rows, some of the tall-growing sorghum varieties, such as Tracy and Sugar Drip, have given relatively high yields of silage on both a green and dry-weight basis. However, the sorghum had less grain content than corn.

The researchers have tried many crops and mixtures of crops in recent years to determine their value for silage in Virginia. Millet, sudan grass, and soybeans when broadcast alone or in mixtures all gave relatively low yields as compared to corn or sorghum, or a mixture of corn and sorghum in rows. Including corn and/or sorghum in broadcast mixtures was of little value.

The scientists concluded that if a silage crop could be planted early enough to use corn or sorghum in rows, broadcast plantings should not be made. Broadcast plantings of the other crops mentioned would be of value mainly as emergency silage crops after corn or sorghum plantings have failed.
